International Mother Language Day-“Using Technology for multilingual learning: Challenges and Opportunities” were celebrated with great fanfare by the Cultural Club of GIPS on 21st February 2022. Prof. Dr. Savita Mohan (Principal GIPS) inaugurated the function and welcomed our keynote speaker Ms. Meeta Gupta (PGT Hindi, Kendriya Vidyalaya). She addressed the gathering, congratulated Mother Language Day, and blessed the students. The students gave speeches, sang songs, recited ghazals, perform folk dances, in many different languages such as Punjabi, Hindi, Kashmiri, Bhojpuri, Nepali, Rajasthani, and other languages. Speaking on the topic of language, education, and development, the learned keynote speaker said that it was important to know the mother tongue for the overall development of the country. A student who is fluent in his mother tongue can easily learn other languages. France, Germany, Japan, China, Sweden, Russia, and Norway are some of the countries where the local languages have become the medium of development instead of English. She further added that today’s urban mothers are reluctant to talk to their children in their mother tongue. This trend can be detrimental in the future as the construction of any society depends on the healthy cultural and linguistic traditions of that society. It was an interactive session where students analyze and understood the importance of their mother tongue. A vote of thanks was proposed by Prof. Ritu Yadav.

Cyber Bullying: Bleak Consequences

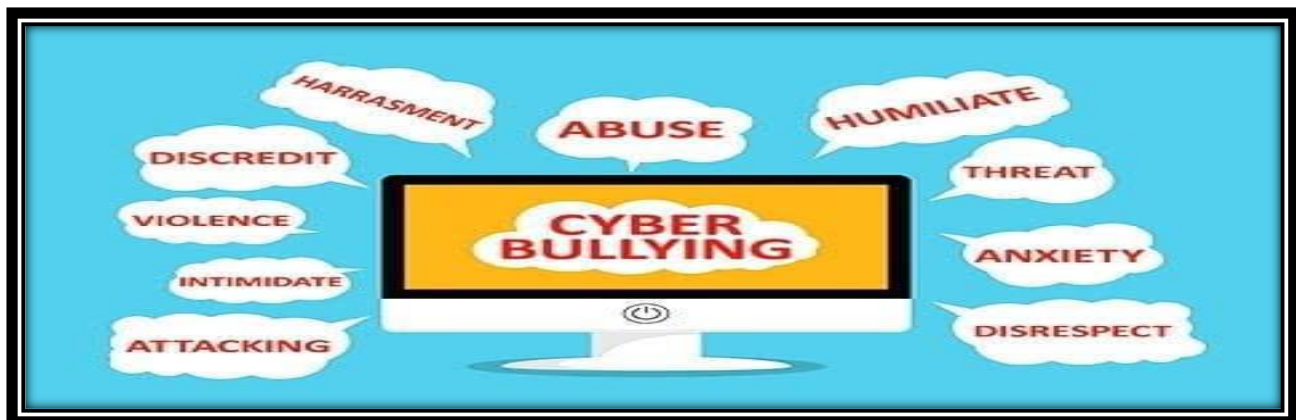

Cyberbullying is bullying that takes place over digital platforms. Cyberbullying—causes significant emotional, psychological distress and low esteem. Cyberbullying and children's craving for likes and going viral is becoming the main issue behind increasing anxiety and depression in them. Their life is like a public domain, that even having food they click the picture and upload it on Instagram, Snapchat, TikTok, and of course WhatsApp. Cyberbullying is one of the prone which leads to suicide. Teens are the major victims of these cyberbullies. Sometimes these bullies are the dear ones of the victims. Psychologists say spending half of the day on social media is resulting in depression among youngsters. The children want to become influential and famous, but they neglect that they do have a high potential for other activities too. Social media addiction just cuts off the relation of kids from the real world. They don't even enjoy their childhood and this generation is missing out on plenty of moral values that may have come to them by mingling with people in real-time. Overwhelmed, powerlessness, humiliation, worthlessness, isolation, and vengefulness are some of the consequences to look upon. It can feel at times like the entire world knows what is going on. Still, the Light de Literacy is required to educate and enlighten teenagers. Be sure to communicate daily, take steps to help end the torment and keep close tabs on changes in mood and their behavior. Don't be the victim of cyberbullying. Don't shut yourself out or bottle up your emotions, talk about it.

1. LEADERSHIP

A leader values each member of his/her group and inspires people to do their best.

Leadership can be both formal and informal. The leader guides us on what needs to be done while maintaining group morale to ensure readiness to act in future activities and in trouble. This character's strength's focus is on the personal quality of leaders, these qualities include the ability to understand others and inspire them towards a common goal, the capacity to calm the situation and mold consensus, and the desire to lead other people.

Positive psychology focuses on transformational leaders. This type of control is a process where leaders and their followers raise one another to higher levels of morality and motivation.

Such leaders are able to create images, communicate the vision, develop a coherent strategy to achieve that vision, and lead the charge towards its attainment. By their words and the things, they have done, these leaders develop an inspirational relationship with their followers. That is, they fill others with the spirit to attain their vision like A.P.J ABDUL KALAM and MAHATMA GANDHI

For individuals, leadership is a way to achieve what you know is important, as a group of people invariably achieve more than individuals. If you want to achieve your organizational goal you need to inspire others to join you as an individual's ability to lead develops. However, common dangers to guard against are egotism and arrogance.

A group's effectiveness and sense of inspiration are tied directly to the leader. Study after study showed that leaders and managers have the biggest influence on group success and morale. Leaders can be developed and it starts with character. "Leadership is a powerful combination of the plan of action and character. But if you must be without one, Be without a plan."

The character of a leader is above all the quality he should have.

2. Online Education in India

Online education comes in shades of grey. The Covid-19 pandemic has affected our lives in various ways. All the countries across the globe resorted to imposing lockdowns to contain the spread of the virus. Lockdowns in turn disrupted the normal way of life. Since schools and colleges had to be closed because of the lockdowns, students have been studying online. Teachers have been conducting classes online over various applications such as google meet, zoom, etc. India as a country had never taken to online education before but the pandemic forced us to resort to it sooner than we thought we were ready to adapt to it.

Online education has not only proven useful to ensure continuous imparting of education to school and college-going students but it has also transformed the way that candidates prepare for competitive exams in India. It is a known fact that every year there are lakhs of aspirants who appear for various competitive exams in India such as the Civil Services Exam, SSC CGL, SSC CHSL, Banking sector exams such as SBI PO, SBI Clerk, IBPS PO, IBPS Clerk, exams conducted by the Railway Recruitment Board, and others by State Public Service Commissions and other recruiting bodies.

Understanding these challenges, various coaching centers like schools and colleges started taking classes online. These candidates have always faced various challenges even before the pandemic. To ensure that all the candidates have access to selection-oriented guidance and resources to prepare for competitive exams, various start-ups have been launched which have been trying to provide online coaching to candidates at minimal prices. Safalta, an initiative of Amar Ujala has been providing guidance to a lot of candidates across the country to help them ace competitive exams.

We need to understand platforms like these are extremely essential for the youth of today. Considering the highly competitive nature of various exams, it is important that candidates have the necessary resources to boost their preparation. Everyone must grow together at all points of time and the financial background of individuals should be an obstruction in their way to achieving their goals. The pandemic has all the more highlighted the importance of these online educational platforms such as Safalta which are providing mentorship to candidates either free of cost or at very low prices. They reflect the future of education in India and the success of a lot of candidates in our country depends on platforms like these.
